Tips for Writing an Effective Award Nomination

Abridged version adapted from the North Carolina Commission on Volunteerism and Community Service

- 1) Nominators play a crucial role in the nominating process. Nominations that are well-written and thorough may be more likely to result in the volunteer receiving an award.
- 2) Remember, all nominations are evaluated and scored by multiple reviewers - at the local level. Reviewers may not know anything about the nominee, other than what is on the nomination form, so the more thorough and well-written the nomination is – the better.
- 3) Reviewers rely on the nominator's descriptive words and examples to assist them in determining and understanding the volunteer's attributes and contributions.
- 4) Be concise and direct. Write the nomination from the heart, but provide information that is clear, concise and easy to read. Reinforce what you are saying with observations, facts and concrete examples. Too much information can be as harmful as too little information.
- 5) Include numbers. How many hours has the volunteer donated? How much money did they raise? How many students were helped? How many meals were delivered? Statistics can help reinforce the accomplishments of the nominee.
- 6) Be sure to describe why your nominee's commitment, accomplishments and special skills/qualities are distinguishable over other volunteers. Share what stands out and what truly makes this volunteer outstanding and worthy of the award.
- 7) Reviewers will want to have a clear understanding of the nominee's outstanding volunteer accomplishments that have made an impact in helping to meet critical needs in their community. Remember to provide specific details and cite examples in the appropriate section of the nomination form.
- 8) Be sure to proofread your statements. Grammatical errors and misspelled words detract from the quality of the nomination.
